Clients appreciate Stuart's attention to detail and ability to make the strongest possible planning case to achieve their goals.

Stuart joined Icen Projects in 2015, having relocated to London from Hertfordshire. He is working on a range of residential, commercial and mixed-use developments, ranging from smaller scale redevelopment schemes to major urban extensions.

Stuart began his planning career with a brief spell at Nathaniel Lichfield & Partners in Newcastle following his MSc at Newcastle University, before joining JB Planning Associates in Stevenage in 2012. During this time he worked on a wide variety of projects for major house builders, investors, commercial operators and public sector clients.

His experience includes projects across London, the south-east and east of England, taking a leading role in the preparation of planning and listed building consent applications, co-ordinating multi-disciplinary teams, and providing technical input on matters such as housing land supply. Recent projects have involved major town centre mixed use schemes, industrial/warehouse developments and the promotion of strategic sites through the Local Plan process, including representing clients at Examination. He also takes a keen interest in policy and legal aspects of planning, and has gained experience in the preparation of evidence for a successful Judicial Review against a Local Authority.

Outside of work, Stuart likes to go for the occasional run (if he manages to get out of bed on a Saturday morning) and to explore the many exciting bars and pubs around London.
